Current funding

Johnson & Johnson Corporate Foundation (Barry)	7/2000-ongoing
Yale/Stanford Global Health Scholars Program	$380,000/1 year

The Global Health Program aims to build the capacity of health care at each of its established sites. Our goal is to establish longstanding Yale/Stanford Johnson & Johnson Health Overseas Partnerships in Education Centers (HOPE Centers) through focusing our scholars and resources at each of the sites. The program seeks to develop partnerships of patient-centered care and models of teaching in low resource settings.
Role: co-PI.

Doris Duke Foundation (Barry) 9/1/2010-8/31/2012
$65,373/2 years
Web-Based interactive course in "Ethical Challenges Encountered During Short-Term Overseas Training in Biomedical Research and Practice"
The major goal of this project is to develop an open access web-based framework to assist health professional students in exploring ethical issues of practicing medicine or performing research within another culture.
Role: PI

1RC4TW008781-01 (Barry) 9/01/2010-8/31/2013
NIH/Fogarty $8,068,259/3 years
Stanford Global Health Consortium on Innovation, Design, Evaluation and Action (C-IDEA).
The major goal of this project is to create a unique infrastructure at Stanford to accelerate scientific progress in the innovative design of extremely affordable diagnostics, drugs, biologics and devices for global health.
Role: PI

1R24TW008881-01 (Hakim-PI) 10/1/2010-9 9/30/2015
NIH/Fogarty (Barry, Campbell Co-PI) $9,998,134/5 years
Novel Education Clinical Trainees and Researchers (NECTAR) Program
The goal of this program is to establish a consortium with the University of Zimbabwe College of Health Sciences and the University of Colorado-Denver to improve medical education in Zimbabwe at the medical student and post graduate levels, coupled with programs to improve faculty training and support and investments in novel educational models and technologies. The ultimate goal is to improve the capacity of UZCHS to meet the healthcare training and research capacity needs of Zimbabwe.
Role: PI of Stanford sub-award

IR25TW009338-01 (Riley, Barry, Ko, Madhivanan, Co-PI's) 07/01/2012-06/30/2017
NIH/Fogarty $5,405,204/5 years
Global Health Fellows and Scholars Research Training
The main objective of this program is to establish a training program comprised of four institutions – University of California, Berkeley, Yale University, Stanford University and Florida International University (called Consortium)—designed to train postdoctoral fellows and upper division graduate and medical students to launch them into a career in global health research. The program will emphasize training through participation in ongoing projects of long-term researchers of the Consortium at 10 sites in low and middle-income countries (LMIC), that revolves around the theme of health problems of informal human settlements known as slums. Through this problem-based, participatory and multidisciplinary training approach, the traiees from the US and LMIC will experience and learn about global health and how to engage themselves in long-term research.

Stanford Hospital and Clinics Award 01/2013-TBD
$285,750/year

To develop a global health initiative for the hospital for residents to experience clinical rotations in supervised overseas sites. Curriculum and seminar series will also be launched.
