S.V. Mahadevan, MD
Professor of Emergency Medicine

S.V. Mahadevan is a Professor of Emergency Medicine at Stanford University School of Medicine. He has written, traveled, and taught widely, presenting over 500 invited lectures worldwide and authoring over 100 journal articles, book chapters, and multimedia publications. Dr. Mahadevan is the founding director of Stanford Emergency Medicine International. He was instrumental in setting up India’s first paramedic training institute, India’s first prehospital research center, Nepal’s first EMS system, Cambodia’s first EM strengthening program, and Myanmar’s first public-private EM training program. He is lead editor of the textbook, An Introduction to Clinical Emergency Medicine, which was awarded the 2006 American Medical Writer’s Association Award: Physician’s Category.