

Mercy by Erik Norbie

There are stories
of animals leaving
home to die alone,

I say, because I don't want to unravel you like yarn.

And even though your muscles are abandoning you
in that chair,

I am the one
terrified of living in sin.

It's not like that you say

I'll be the leaf, you be the wind.