The Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences at Stanford University School of Medicine is seeking 1-2 full-time faculty members at the rank of Assistant Professor, Associate Professor, or full Professor in the University Tenure Line, Medical Center Line, or Non-Tenure Line (Research). These are clinical, research, and teaching positions focused on grief and bereavement across the lifespan, including issues related to end-of-life care, palliative care, and/or bioethics topics related to end-of-life, premature mortality, and related topics. The successful candidates will utilize multi-disciplinary methodology to conduct cutting-edge scholarly research, provide specialized clinical care, and teach and supervise Stanford trainees in psychiatry and psychology. Excellent clinical training in psychiatry or psychology and an established track record of research are expected. Experience conducting multi-dimensional psychiatric or psychological research that integrates conceptual and factual information across related dimensions of inquiry, such as clinical trials, behavioral science, bioethics, neuroimaging, neuroscience, and/or genomics, is desired. Eligible physician candidates must have a medical degree or equivalent degree, completed training in General Psychiatry, be board certified in General Psychiatry or board eligible by August 2016, and possess or be fully eligible for a California medical license. Eligible psychologist candidates must have a doctoral degree in clinical psychology or equivalent degree, and possess or be fully eligible for a California psychology license.

- The predominant criterion for appointment in the University Tenure Line is a major commitment to research and teaching.
- The major criteria for appointment for faculty in the Medical Center Line shall be excellence in the overall mix of clinical care, clinical teaching, scholarly activity that advances clinical medicine, and institutional service appropriate to the programmatic need the individual is expected to fulfill.
- The major criterion for appointment for faculty in the Non-Tenure Line (Research) is evidence of high-level performance as a researcher for whose special knowledge a programmatic need exists.

Stanford University is an equal opportunity employer and is committed to increasing the diversity of its faculty. It welcomes nominations of and applications from women, members of minority groups, protected veterans and individuals with disabilities, as well as from others who would bring additional dimensions to the university’s research, teaching and clinical missions. Interested candidates should send a copy of their curriculum vitae, a brief letter outlining their interests, and the names of three references via e-mail only to:
