The Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences at the Stanford University School of Medicine is seeking a full-time faculty member to provide clinical care and teaching in the area of Psychosomatic Medicine. The Department’s program in Psychosomatic Medicine, composed of two very busy and highly integrated inpatient and outpatient service lines, performs an average of 2,000 new consults each year. Stanford Medical Center has over 400 beds, of which 65 are specifically designated for intensive and coronary care. Our ACGME-accredited Psychosomatic Medicine Fellowship Training Program trains two fellows each year.

The chosen candidate will be appointed in the Clinician Educator faculty line at the rank of Clinical Instructor, Clinical Assistant Professor, or Clinical Associate Professor. Rank and salary will be commensurate with experience.

Candidates must have a medical degree (or equivalent), be licensed or license-eligible in California, hold board certification in General Psychiatry, hold subspecialty board certification or board-eligibility in Psychosomatic Medicine, and have experience in the diagnosis and management of medically ill patients with comorbid psychiatric disorders. Participation in clinical research is optional, but encouraged.

Stanford University is an equal opportunity employer and is committed to increasing the diversity of its faculty. It welcomes nominations of and applications from women and members of minority groups, as well as others who would bring additional dimensions to the university’s research, teaching and clinical missions. Interested candidates should send a cover letter, current curriculum vitae, three letters of reference, and the names of five additional references to:
