

Stanford
MEDICINE

Stanford Center for Continuing Medical Education

Learning from Teaching Medical Students and Residents/Fellows

Verification Form

The Stanford Center for Continuing Medical Education (SCCME) as an accredited CME provider may award AMA PRA Category 1 Credit™ to physician faculty to recognize the learning associated with the preparation for and teaching of medical students and residents/fellows in LCME/ACGME accredited facilities/programs as approved by the AMA Council on Medical Education.

Physicians may claim credit for a variety of interactions. Types of teaching activities include, but are not limited to, formal presentations to medical students, residents; development of cases, clinical problems; supervising clinical or simulated activities; instruction on clinical or other skills; assessing learner performance (clinical or simulation settings); mentoring QI or PI projects; and mentoring of scholarly activities.

To learn more about Learning from Teaching please go to <http://learning-from-teaching.stanford.edu>.

Name of Person Seeking Credit: _____

Organization/Title: _____

Email: _____

Date(s): _____

Description of teaching sufficient enough so that the verifier can verify the information.

Verification Section

I attest that person above person seeking CME credit for learning from teaching was in a position to teach medical students and/or residents/fellows in an LCME/ACGME accredited facilities/program during the time period indicated. Please note the verifier needs to be someone in a position of authority that can attest that the person was indeed in a position to teach as described. Examples include, program director, course director, clerkship director, department chair, department division chief or similar level, or someone from the GME/UME office.

Name of Verifier: _____

Organization/Title: _____

Email: _____

Signature: _____

IMPORTANT: ATTACH COMPLETED VERIFICATION FORM TO ONLINE CLAIM FORM SUBMISSION