Children with Autism Needed for a Research Study

Stanford University researchers are recruiting children with Autism Spectrum Disorders to participate in a research study examining the effectiveness of a Developmental Reciprocity Treatment Program in targeting social communication abilities in young children with autism.

Participants must:

- Be diagnosed with an Autism Spectrum Disorder
- Be between the ages of 2 and 5 years
- Meet inclusion based on behavioral screening assessments
- Be willing to complete a 24 week research treatment program including visits at Stanford University and in-home treatment

There is no cost to participate in this research study.
