Promoting Resident Experiences in the Subspecialties at Stanford

ANNOUNCING OUR

Visiting Rotation for Pediatrics Residents

Learn about Pediatric
Subspecialties at Stanford
School of Medicine!

The Department of Pediatrics at Stanford School of Medicine is committed to recruiting and supporting prospective fellows with a variety of backgrounds and life experiences to reach a new level of innovation in instruction, research, and patient care. We want to welcome applicants who identify as underrepresented in medicine in terms of race, ethnicity, socioeconomic status, abilities, life experiences, sexual orientation and gender identity. This program is designed to foster a community of diverse learners and faculty and to provide residents the opportunity to explore fellowship opportunities within our pediatric medical subspecialties.

Program Goals

- To provide educational and career development in support of Stanford Medicine's mission.
- To enhance the educational experience of all trainees by promoting the diversity of our community.
- To foster opportunities for collaboration between Stanford Medicine and other institutions and encourage trainees to consider Stanford Medicine for their future training and career.

What Participants Can Anticipate

- Visiting residents will be awarded a $6,000 stipend* for participating in the program. The stipend is designed to help offset the cost of housing and transportation. It will be dispersed in two installments—$2,000 before the rotation and $4,000 following the rotation. The resident's home institution must cover their salary and benefits.
- Visiting residents will receive mentorship from outstanding Stanford faculty members.
- Visiting residents will participate in activities designed to foster connections within the cohort, with Stanford Pediatrics residents and fellows, and more broadly across the Stanford community.
- Dates for the four-week rotation will be either March or April.
