

Anxiety Disorders Specialist

Outpatient Services

Clinical Assistant Professor, Clinical Associate Professor, or Clinical Professor

The Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences at the Stanford University School of Medicine is seeking a full-time or part-time psychiatry faculty member to provide clinical care and teaching with a focus on anxiety disorders. Clinical care and teaching will be provided primarily in outpatient settings, with the possibility of providing inpatient care depending on interest and need. Outpatient work consists of providing clinical supervision and education to general psychiatry residents, fellows and a small number of medical students. A limited and very flexible amount of direct patient care would be expected. Any inpatient work would consist of serving as the attending for the general adult inpatient service. This position is ideal for a candidate who enjoys working with trainees and thrives in a team-based environment. Many opportunities exist for teaching, scholarly work, research collaborations, and quality improvement initiatives.

Applicants must have a medical degree or an equivalent degree, must have completed training in General Psychiatry, must be board-certified or board-eligible in General Psychiatry, must have experience in treating anxiety disorders, and must possess or be fully eligible for a California medical license.

Rank and salary will be commensurate with experience.

Stanford is an equal employment opportunity and affirmative action employer. All qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, national origin, disability, protected veteran status, or any other characteristic protected by law. Stanford welcomes applications from all who would bring additional dimensions to the University's research, teaching and clinical missions.

Interested candidates should send a cover letter and current curriculum vitae to Laura Roberts, M.D., M.A., c/o Dr. Elias Aboujaoude at eaboujaoude@stanford.edu.
