

Internal or Family Medicine Physician – Mental Health Clinic

The Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences at the Stanford University School of Medicine is seeking a full-time faculty member in the Clinician Educator Line at the Clinical Assistant Professor rank to provide clinical care in our multidisciplinary Immune Behavioral Health Clinic outpatient clinic. This position requires strong interest in and/or experience with working collaboratively with a team.

The Immune Behavioral Health (IBH) Program was started in 2012 as the Pediatric Acute-onset Neuropsychiatric Syndrome (PANS) Program with the mission to learn about its cause and treatment. The Program established the first PANS clinic in the United States. It has an active research program which includes a clinical database and biobank embedded in the clinic and collaboration with numerous scientists.

The chosen candidate will serve as an attending physician and provide clinical care in the IBH Program. Responsibilities will include conducting outpatient evaluations and treatment as well as providing supervision and didactics to the clinical trainees in the Program. The successful candidate is expected to work collaboratively with a multidisciplinary team that includes pediatric rheumatologists, child psychiatrists, nurse practitioners, and therapists.

Applicants should have training in children and adolescent psychiatry with experience in evaluating youth with a broad spectrum of presenting problems. Expertise in adolescents with immune-mediated behavioral disorders is preferred. We are currently accepting applications and review will continue on a rolling basis until the position is filled.

Rank and salary will be commensurate with experience.

Clinical Assistant Professor: $228,000-240,000

This position commands a competitive salary enhanced by an attractive benefits package, including, but not limited to, generous housing assistance and home purchase programs, bonus programs, paid vacation time, paid personal time, as well as health/dental/vision benefits, paid malpractice, and 403(b) plans.

Stanford is an equal employment opportunity and affirmative action employer. All qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, national origin, disability, protected veteran status, or any other characteristic protected by law. Stanford also welcomes applications from others who would bring additional dimensions to the University's research, teaching, and clinical missions.
